The energy company ENAMO is situated in a historic building and wanted to renew two seminar rooms representing their company's philosophy. As the walls had to be kept clean for the beamer projection, we used the ceiling and the floor in order to create a special aura in the seminar rooms.

On the ceiling are shown flowing lines. We liked the idea of thoughts moving freely. Besides the formal aspect of the ceiling, we also integrated a cooling system and as an asset the acoustic aspect is extremely high through the ceiling.

In order to optimize the acoustic, we also used carpet tiles. The design shows straight lines, which are laying in a chessboard optic.

Our intention were the straight lines, moving through the users of the room up to the ceiling and showing a free flow of thoughts.
